

We all know that students have different styles of learning. How do we make sense of the, often bewildering, variety of learning styles models and research?

Here is an excellent overview of the literature on learning styles. It summarizes the various models in a succinct format. This report is available in both hardcopy and in downloadable electronic versions from the Eric Documentation Retrieval Services (ERIC).

Swanson, Linda J. (1995). Learning styles: A review of the literature. ERIC Document No.ED387067.

www.edrs.com

(800) 799-3742